Items on a to do list crossword

If you use Fantastical 2 on your iPhone or iPad, there are many useful tricks and keyboard shortcuts that you can use when entering an event or reminder. One of the most convenient and time-saving is how to change which calendar or reminder list the new item will continue. Of course, you can always manually select a calendar or a reminder list, but why if you achieve the same thing in half the time? Launch Fantastical 2 on your iPhone or iPad. Tap the + sign to add a new event as you normally would. Write down your event or reminder title as Lunch with René at 2. This time, instead of manually choosing a different calendar or list, type a forward slash followed by the list or calendar name. So instead you'd have Lunch with René in 2/personal. You should instantly notice that the calendar in which the event will make changes to the preview. Actually, you can change the calendar in even fewer keystrokes. For example, since I only have one calendar that starts with the letter p, as soon as I start typing personal, the calendar changes. So I can actually just write Lunch with René in 2/p and achieve exactly the same result. If you have more than one calendar that starts with the same letter, just type until you reach the first distinctive letter and Fantastical 2 takes care of the rest. This site is not available in your country Photo: Pkxabay (Pexels)For some reason, many people believe that the ability to solve crossword puzzles is a doled out talent at birth to a select few. This couldn't be further from the truth. Crossword puzzles are not an immutable test of your vocabulary or intelligence, they are a learned skill that anyone can develop. Learning new skills is one of the best ways to become marketable and happy, but... Read moreNo other word game or puzzle asks for both your brain and a crossword puzzle. Experienced puzzles consider not only the literal meaning of each track, but also the similar ones you've seen before, frequently repeated answers, syntax peculiarities, word games, cultural references and, of course, the theme of the puzzle. Unfortunately, this means that crossword puzzles can be frankly unpleasant for newcomers. Everyone starts somewhere, and no matter what their capabilities look like now, here are four general strategies to help you improve. Doing Puzzles Every DayThe only way to improve on crossword puzzles is to make a lot of them, and the best way to do it is to work on your daily routine. For me, that means tackling some puzzles from an old 365 Will Shortz crossword book before going to bed all the My mom prints Washington Post crossword puzzles and fries on them over breakfast; my friends who travel daily by bus or train are staunch fans of the New York Times crossword app. G/O Media can get a commissionCubil Pro Under-Desk EllipticalNew York Times puzzle are most of the crossword gateway drug from most people for a reason: easy to find and have a built-in difficulty rating. Mondays are the easiest, Saturdays are the hardest, and puzzles between ramp day by day, so you can choose the ones that work for you. That said, the New York Times is far from the only publisher there is. The Washington Post, Los Angeles Times and Merriam-Webster also publish daily American-style crossword puzzles; if cryptic crossword puzzles are your jam, try The Guardian. Some organizations, such as Queer Crosswords and Puzzles for Progress, will even send you original themed puzzles as a reward for nonprofit donations. Just remember that each post has its own style: mastering the complicated track phrase in a New York Times Saturday puzzle won't necessarily translate into one of the Post, and vice versa. Use an App If you really want to upload your crossword puzzle game, subscribing to an app, like this one from the New York Times, is a great idea. As much as I like them, paper puzzles simply can't touch the easy-to-use features you get with an app. You can easily check your work or reveal answers letter by letter, instead of accidentally looking at the whole solution. This demystifies the clues enough to make them feasible, which is exactly what you want. In addition, most apps time on time for your work, which makes it easy to measure your progress. But actually, the biggest advantage is accessibility: carrying thousands of digital puzzles in your pocket makes it easy to do a lot of puzzles. Knowing when and how CheatCheating is a sensitive subject among crossword enthusiasts, but there's no denying that it has its place. Crossword puzzles should be fun, and hitting me repeatedly against the same wall, praying for a different result, is not my idea of fun. In addition, frustration is a master condolence; unless you have serious competitive puzzle aspirations, stubbornly refusing to look for answers or check your work won't get you anywhere. Many games require a great investment, at least, if you want to have the best equipment, the... Read moreObviously, you have to solve as many clues as you can without help, but you can't improve without a challenge. A little strategic trap can guide you even through the most difficult puzzles. The apps make this very easy: just check or reveal letters one at a time until you can solve a particularly unpleasant track. This gives you enough information to (mostly) hack on your own, which in turn makes the most likely response to stick to your memory. Paper puzzles make strategic traps a little more difficult, but thanks to the Internet, not for long. If you're stuck in a printed crossword puzzle, Google the entire track in quotes, your search around the track instead of, say, how many letters you have to work will help you understand what the track wanted from you. Over time, you'll find yourself in need of less and less help solving puzzles that previously would have been real clumsy. Study UpSi you take seriously the mastery of crossword puzzles, the Internet is full of like-minded people who would love to help. A One like Rex Parker is a great place to start. Solve the New York Times puzzle every day, compare the difficulty with other puzzles that day of the week, and break down pairs of key clues/answers into a short post. Between posts and comments, you'll get a more complete picture of the solution than if you'd searched for answers. You can also specialize even more and review your crossword puzzles, words that often appear in crossword puzzles but almost never in conversation. The New York Times has a quiz that tests your crossword puzzle knowledge, and there's a more general guide to Dictionary.com. Perhaps predictably, there is also an entire website dedicated to the crossword puzzle, with a new word appearing every day and an extensive file. If a statistical approach is more your speed, there are crossword response databases out there. Data scientist Noah Veltman analyzed a set of new York Times crossword tracks and responses from 1996-2012, then fixed them by crossword puzzles and how often they appeared. You can filter lists by the minimum number of appearances or word length, and view details about any given response. Similarly, Xwordinfo.com will show you the most popular answers and clues for Times puzzles by year or duration of the word. Hell, you could really go to everything and code some training programs like this guy did, although it's unclear whether his approach is more effective than just doing a lot of crossword puzzles. This is not to say that you need to build a robot or memorize clues to solve crossword puzzles more efficiently; the best training strategy is the one that makes you happy. No matter how many puzzles you solve, or how quickly you can solve them, just keep it. If you can do that, you'll never stop improving. Today at work we were encouraged to wear our favorite NFL shirts, to celebrate the start of the football season here in the United States. I'm wearing my favorite regular blue blouse. And every time someone asks me where my shirt is, I answer that this is the way I normally show support for my local football team. Or any football team. Can you say I'm not a fan? And it's not just football either. I'm not a fan of baseball, hockey, basketball or football, either. However, I love watching the Olympics. So I'm not anti-sports, actually, it's not my thing. I wasn't raised on a sports diet, and I can think of other ways I'd rather spend my time. And now that I'm a single woman, that's exactly what I do every Sunday during football season. Peter is a fan, and that was fine with me, but he got grumpy that I never shared his passion and preferred to be doing grocery shopping or watching a movie while the game was in. When the children arrived, my only job was to ride herds in the entire duration of the pre-game, game and post-game wrapping so you could enjoy it without interruptions. I was afraid on weekends during the football season. I always wondered why my lack of enthusiasm for football irritated him so much. I never got grumpy grumpy didn't see Dancing With The Stars or old Star Trek episodes with me. Each one of you, right? Did your ex have a hobby you didn't eat? Did they get irritated when you didn't participate?
